Contributing to content

Art directors created and commissioned original artwork for stories with complex concepts or where photographs, video or graphics were not the best option or available.

Hand-drawn, organic visuals often helped these stories stand out in news feeds, on social platforms or search results.

Plus “passion projects”

Designers often pitched ideas or in some cases even researched and wrote their own stories.

These were often the best examples of truly integrated storytelling.

Thank you

Collaboration is the key to excellence, whether it's taking on newsroom or business challenges.

I believe in fostering an environment where creatives can contribute to solving problems and perform at the highest levels. Any additional questions:

Before moving into leadership, I learned every role hands-on: page design, art direction, illustration, front-end code, photo editing. That provided an important understanding of what's possible technically and what reads for an audience.
